GERMANY ASKS PERMISSION TO BUILD UP ARMY

Five Point Program Reported Handed To France.

SAAR DEMANDED

Hitler Government Opposed to Gas, Bombing Planes.

By The Associated Press.
PARIS, Dec. 7.—Rumors that Chancellor Hitler of Germany has prepared a five-point program for permanent peace with France were given something of an air of authenticity today by a French foreign office refusal to deny or confirm them.

Hitler's Demands

The alleged Hitler program was reported to be as follows:
(1) Allowance of a conscript army of 300,000 to Germany.
(2) The right of Germany to possess defensive weapons such as airplanes and tanks.
(3) The international prohibition of the use of gas and bombing planes.
(4) Disarmament of the heavily-armed powers.
(5) The return of the Saar basin to Germany without a plebiscite.

French officials insisted there had been no discussion whatsoever with Hitler since his talk with Andre Francois-Poncet, French ambassador to Germany. It was said the French are flatly opposed to surrendering the Saar, taken by the treaty of Versailles at the end of the World war, without a plebiscite, and were equally opposed to the suggestion that Germany arm.

Sounds Out Sentiment

Before answering such a proposal as Hitler was reputed to have made, however, France was expected to begin a process of sounding out the United States, Great Britain, and the little entente, composed of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

Ohio Remains Dry Until Two Enforcement Acts Are Repealed

Judiciary Committee of Legislature Studies White's Liquor Control Recommendations.

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, Dec. 7.—Ohio was out at a junction point today, off the water wagon but waiting for an omnibus to come along and carry the buckeye state into wet territory where it could raise a thirst and get a drink.
The omnibus, a bill which at once would repeal two enforcement acts, control liquor in the future, levy fees for manufacture and sale, and assess penalties, was moving but slowly.
It was approved by the governor and by key leaders in the legislature. It had the sanction of important advisors of the executive. Last night and today the judiciary committee of the house and the senate, like so many engineers, studied the mechanism before parading it before the assembly.
Meantime, another model of liquor control machinery was studied by the committee, a measure introduced by Rep. George Harter, of Akron, who proposed a district licensing system.
Whatever partisan reception may be offered was mirrored in a statement by James A. Jones, of (Continued On Page 5)

FLIERS FETED BY BRAZILIANS

Col. Lindbergh, Wife Honored After Atlantic Flight.

By The Associated Press.
NATAL, Brazil, Dec. 7.—Natal, accustomed as it is to feting fliers, admittedly had a problem on the line today in the matter of honoring—or trying to honor—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.
The smiling tactfulness with which the Americans responded to cheers from throngs that hailed them on their arrival yesterday from Bathurst, Gambia, Africa, continued to mask their plans and movements.
The usual rumors flew the rounds: Flights into the interior, hops along the coast—and even a grand tour skirting the continent. But there was neither "yes" nor "no" from the flying couple officially.
Col. Lindbergh today inspected his monoplane. He was out in the harbor long before noon, engaged in a personal examination of the big red ship.
While her husband labored on the plane, Mrs. Lindbergh, dark bit of sightseeing, Mrs. Scotchbrook, the wife of the British consul, accompanied her on the tour of the historic city.

TREASURY TO RAISE BILLION DOLLAR FUND

$950,000,000 in One-year Certificates Offered.

INTEREST FIXED

Nation's Public Debt Pushed to New High Level.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Routine methods for raising a billion dollars were chosen by the treasury today in its first big financing operation since gold buying began.

Dispersing by its action all talk that greenbacks might be used to meet December maturities, the treasury offered the money market 2 1/2 per cent for funds to meet immediate needs.

Books were opened for subscriptions on $950,000,000 of one-year treasury certificates, dated December 15, and paying the 2 1/2 per cent rate. The money will be used to retire $728,000,000 of obligations maturing on the same date—$473,328,000 of 4 1/2 certificates and $254,674,000 of 3 1/2's.

$14,000,000 in interest. Another portion, $114,000,000, will go to interest payments on the public debt. The remainder or more than $100,000,000, will be added to the treasury's cash balance which stands now above $1,000,000,000.

By exceeding December maturities by $222,000,000, the financing will push the public debt that much higher. It stands now at more than $23,500,000,000 after reaching a low just above $16,000,000,000 from the war-debt peak of $26,596,000,000 in 1919.

Just what effect the gold-buying program had on the form of the refunding issue was at question between those for and against the gold policy. The former foresaw no difficulty in disposing of the securities and considered the interest moderate, pointing out that more than half the maturing obligations are paying 4 1/2 per cent.

$460,000,000 Due in March. Others contended the gold policy had created a condition in the bond market which required the treasury to use short-term credit or pay excessive interest. They said the 4 1/2 maturities were so high only because they were floated at the time of the bank holiday.

The December financing, when completed, will leave considerably more borrowing for the near future. There are $460,000,000 of March 15 maturities.

FESS SEES END OF ROOSEVELT

G. O. P. Leader Flays Democratic Administration.

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7.—Senator Simon D. Fess, of Ohio, predicted Franklin D. Roosevelt will not be president more than three years from now.

It looks, the senior Ohio senator told Ohio Republican leaders here yesterday, like "we're going to hell." Senator Fess denounced the administration's monetary course, the operation of the federal relief program and the national recovery program.

"No government can spend itself into prosperity," Fess said attacking relief administration which he termed "commendable in purpose but not in operation."

The recovery program is a direct violation of the law of supply and demand, he said.

"We're facing the most stupendous deficit in history and that's our beginning," Fess charged.

The convention of Republican chiefs and lieutenants debated adoption of a "sound money" resolution, taunted by Sherman Eagle, Gallipolis veteran party leader, that none could explain what sound money is.

He proposed a motion favoring a return to the gold standard of $20.67 an ounce fixed in 1879. The convention demurred, adoption instead a resolution affirming the gold standard of 1900.

300 MORE JOBS PROVIDED BY 40-HOUR WEEK

Payrolls in Six Plants To Be Boosted to 5,400.

HOURS FIXED

No Decision in Wage Parley in Cleveland.

Nearly 300 additional jobs for pottery workers, most of them in the skilled branches of the industry will be available in the East Liverpool district within the next week as a result of the 40-hour work week in the chinaware and porcelain code which became effective today.

While the code became operative the tenth day after it was signed by President Roosevelt, two weeks or more will be required to get the plan into working order.

5,100 Potters at Work.

Six pottery manufacturing plants in the East Liverpool district reported approximately 5,100 employees on their payrolls at the present time. This number will be increased to about 5,400 when the 40-hour work week gets into the proper working order, it was estimated.

Not all departments will operate on a 40-hour week basis, however, according to plant owners, exceptions having been made in those departments where skilled workers cannot be secured to fill additional jobs.

Most of the plant owners announced an eight-hour day, five-day week arrangement for employees who will work on the 40-hour week plan. Plants, however, will continue to operate on a six-day per week basis as has been necessary during the summer and fall months.

Employees in certain departments in one of the Newell plants will work seven hours for five days and five hours on the sixth day to make a total of 40 hours for the week.

No Decision at Wage Parley.

Representatives of the United States Potters association and the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters continued their discussions in the Hotel Hollenden at Cleveland today on the latter's demand for a 25 per cent increase in wages, which began Tuesday afternoon. Duffy, president of the brotherhood, announced at noon today that no conclusions had yet been reached at the joint conference.

Announcement was made today that the United States Potters association would return to Cleveland next Tuesday and Wednesday for its annual meeting, which will also be held in the Hollenden hotel. Officers will be elected and committee reports featured at this year's meeting.

Last year's meeting of the manufacturers was held in Washington.

The General Assembly's Duty

Every act and every attitude of the general assembly, convened to give Ohio a liquor control system, will be subjected to close scrutiny. There is an important and difficult job to perform—a job in which every alert person in the state has a vital interest.

At the outset, no definite lines of approach are visible, other than those recommended by Governor White's advisory commission. The plan approved by the commission, virtually that submitted to the country by the research group financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr., has been made familiar by public discussion.

To limit as far as possible the motive of stimulating sales of distilled beverages—the traditional curse of liquor control systems—the commission recommends state monopoly of package sales of such beverages. To drive the speakeasy out of business, the commission recommends sale by the glass of distilled spirits, in addition to fermented beverages in specified establishments.

By application of a higher tax rate to distilled beverages the Rockefeller group reasons that consumption of fermented beverages would be encouraged. This is a point well taken; it should not be disregarded by the general assembly. Ohio is assured of the cooperation of the federal government in this matter.

Details of the problem the general assembly faces are formidable in number. Constituents of the members need not be aware of these complexities; dealing with them is one of the hardships of lawmaking. Lawmakers, however, can share profitably in the simplified conception of the people.

One of those conceptions, developed painfully during the years of national prohibition is this: The best social regulatory law is that one which will be obeyed. No unreasonable restriction inherited from those who fancied the United States could be made dry by legislation is entitled to a place in the system of state control.

Another fundamental belief of the people is that the general assembly should not expect to achieve a perfect control system in one move. Whatever laws it enacts, there will be necessity for revision as conditions change in the years to come. This will not be the result of inherent capacity in the assembly, but the inevitable result of circumstances.

It becomes, in view of this fact, the assembly's duty to devise a system adjusted to present conditions. It is too soon to be concerned with the remote future, although any good system will be able to perpetuate itself by demonstrations of merit.

The obligation of senators and representatives in Columbus to give Ohio a liquor control system is to the majority—the majority which has voted to give residents of this state the right to obtain alcoholic beverages legally, in the belief that the illicit liquor traffic and its well known threats to social security can be eliminated most effectively in that way.

Widening the A. B. Degree

Bluffton college, in Ohio, not famous nor likely to be for performances on the grid-iron, is making an unique claim for distinction. It will broaden the basis of the A. B. degree by offering a course in marriage. From a modest beginning, the idea may grow to the extent that Bluffton graduates will have to make a passing mark in the fundamentals of how to be happy though married.

As Thoreau observed, "there is more of good nature than of good sense at the bottom of most marriages." Perhaps there is no way to change the haphazard operation of the mating instinct, but it is significant that few attempts have been made. Some of the work exerted on growing divorce rates might better be applied to precautions against incompatibility.

If marriages are made in heaven, a goodly percentage of the details are arranged in the shadows of college buildings where young men and women approaching marriageable ages are thrown together in pursuit of education. There could be no better atmosphere of study than is created under such circumstances.

What would be studied? Not textbooks, perhaps, nor learned treatises by specialists, but the sound opinions of others who are working in the laboratory of marriage—actual people with actual problems. There is no dearth of evidence on the things which wreck marriages. Congratulations to an institution apparently interested in presenting evidence on the things which solidify them.

Wornout Welcome

Samuel Insull's contemplation of the glory that was Greece has been interrupted abruptly. Official spokesmen for his hosts are hinting that his welcome may be wearing out. Apparently, they are thinking better of their original decision to let the United States whistle for his return.

The yardage of red tape involved is too great for a layman's understanding, yet in its intricate tangles there can be followed a thread of reason. Greek courts, entertaining a curious conception of their function, chose to try Mr. Insull instead of determining the merit of this government's claim for extradition.

Their judgment is under challenge by the executive branch of the government, whose diplomatic contact with the United States is more intimate, to say the least. Thus, the hint that it may be possible to give up Mr. Insull is issued, not by a judge, but by a prime minister.

The pleasure of the subject, according to an interview with an American newspaperman, would be to return to the United States and absolve himself of all blame in connection with the collapse of his intricate utility structure. One thing holds him back—the fear that his health would not be equal to the strain of a long trial.

With all consideration for Mr. Insull, his fear of inability to stand the strain is beside the point. Few of the men who have stood trial for their part in the era of unbridled expansion welcomed the ordeal as a boon to their health. Some of them undoubtedly made great sacrifices of physical strength to their questioned integrity. Those sacrifices were part of the price men bargain for when they gain the privilege of handling other people's money. Mr. Insull, guilty or innocent of the charges against him, owes his clients a personal accounting for his stewardship.

The Next Session of Congress

The first regular session of the new congress already is being anticipated in preparations for its work. Senator Robinson, majority leader in the senate, conversed with President Roosevelt recently and subsequently published a statement.

Its salient point was the Democratic intention to make the session as short as possible. As much as possible will be done in advance to forestall wordy delays of action. It is the present intention to terminate the session in the spring.

Once more the proper function of a minority is brought into discussion by this intention. Obviously, Republican members of congress will try to raise issues in the coming session. Perhaps by the beginning of the year they will dare to criticize weak points in President Roosevelt's policy.

They will be looking forward to congressional elections in 1934, their first opportunity to regain some of the ground they lost during the Democratic landslides in the two preceding elections. Under the two-party system they have an obligation to make the majority defend itself.

Perhaps it is not the Republicans so much as the Democrats who are worrying the administration. No one has forgotten the country's marvel at the way the consolidated majority was held in line during the special session. No one has forgotten, either, the occasional indications of disruption. Nevertheless, congress broke all records for compliance and speed.

It is acknowledged that the trick has done with adroit use of the patronage persuader in the special session. Congressmen tempted to get out of line were reminded pointedly that there were jobs to be dispensed. The result was good; it enabled the administration to act speedily when speed was demanded.

It will be different in the regular session. Disappointed members of the majority are in evidence everywhere. Having failed to get what they wanted, their support can be depended on no longer. They will be unwieldy, particularly in the struggle over inflation when party lines are expected to be ignored in a fight on principle.

As Played By Experts

Financiers and interested observers of their methods are watching, with fascinated interest re-enactment of the methods by which William Fox lost control of his vast interests in the motion picture business. Although they are passing familiar with all that transpired, the senate banking committee's investigation is giving new unity to the story.

Fox has told his side of it with the help of Upton Sinclair. His story, probably describing with reasonable truthfulness what the former movie magnate knew of the operations which had been set in motion to reduce his prestige and power, is a startling revelation of the financial game as played by experts. Fox, incidentally, proves that he was no novice. He was defeated in a game which he, too, understood.

Such records should accrue readability with the passage of years. The current generation still is too close to the facts to look at them objectively. Its members still are swayed in their judgment by what was, as late as 1930, their tolerance of the dubious manipulations which made great fortunes when they worked and produced great disasters when they failed.

The machinations of William Fox and the powerful interests which finally trapped him failed. They became, thereby, merely one more phase of a collapse which was expected to show the people that the era of financial monkey business had written its own conclusion. Yet, equipped with a law to prevent possible repetition of the intricate business of doing tricks with other people's money, there seems no positive disposition to welcome the reformation that is possible. The sheep are still willing to play with the wolves, if the wolves are willing.

Today's News Review

Prohibition Dead
HEARST RANCH, SAN SIMON, CAL., Dec. 7.—Prohibition, mother of bootlegging and the world's highest crime wave, died, officially, Tuesday.

Bootlegging and crime, unfortunately, are not dead, and there is no certainty that crime's annual cost to this country of thirteen thousand million dollars will not go on.

Bootleg Crime, Much Alive
All depends on good judgment in liquor taxation, and on police, judicial and general official integrity and energy.

If liquors are taxed too highly, Europe and Canada, sending in whisky free of home taxation, will offer to crime all the bootleg profit it needs.
And if distribution is hampered, in the prohibition spirit, speakeasies will continue to flourish. It has been wisely said that if you hamper decent drinking in decent places, there will be indecent drinking in indecent places.

A Ride in California
Changing to a more pleasant subject, read some details of one ride over a few miles of rolling hills and cattle trails, along the edge of the Pacific ocean.

Charlie Ehlen, who looks after the horses and knows how to do it, has two "pintos," spotted black and white horses, saddled early. Cowboy saddles and bridles, and girths that call for experience and strength. And there is another good sermon in the great herd of heavy horses, signs in their enclosure of 1,000 acres reading:

"Animals in this pasture dangerous to pedestrians."
Some of the big bull bison at this season have "fly sores" and make them worse rubbing against trees. It would be easy and a pleasure to help them, and cure the sores, without waiting for colder weather to end the fly nuisance. But if you tried to help a bull bison he would trample and gore you, not thank you.

Bisons in Japan
Three animals from that bison herd—a bull and two cows—are now in Japan, and called "saigu." The Japanese language having no word for bison, "saigu" means "watercow."

Mr. Hearst shipped the bison as a friendly gift to the Honorable Matsutaro Shoriki, editor and owner of the Tokyo Shimbun and other Japanese newspapers. (Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

O. O. McIntyre
New York Day By Day

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—In the hall fellow circles they are called the "cut-in boys." Highly polished, correctly spruce fellows who are found at the choice cafe tables with orchidaceous companions. Many are black sheep who have drifted into this form of polite racketeering.

Unlike the gorillas, they do not carry karts and their conversation has a drawing room hoity-toity. Because of this veneer they are able to scrape up acquaintance easily, especially after a few drinks. At a lull in conversation, one begins to toy idly with a pair of dice.

A confederate chances along and banters: "Shoot a quarter." In no time at all a small state crap game is in full rattle. The come-on is invariably drawn in. The polished gentleman and his lady finally suggest that all repair to their apartment where they will be undisturbed.

So smooth is the innocent jockeying, the sucker does not realize the whole thing was planned for him. The rascals know all about him even to his Bradstreet rating. His loss often runs as high as $10,000. If he wetches on checks, there's sinister phoning. And he pays. The "cut-in boys" get their divvy.

My rub with confidence men is limited to a single experience—a card shark of the ocean liners with whom I crossed one winter. Among the greyhounds he was known by the fruit tag of "Apples" but on the passenger list he was "T. Roberts La Verne, and valet." He occupied a deck chair next mine but, although the captain warned me, he did not make gambling suggestion. His negligence made me feel quite worldly.

Bill Hamilton's London taxicab, replete with meter, luggage rack and enormous headroom, is the latest gasp in the vehicular flow. He hailed it along The Strand recently for a ride from the Savoy to the theater and found it the only one in which he had ever won a high hat comfortably. So he bargained with the driver—paid the $40 price and brought it home.

No vaudeville bill ever attained the eminence of that appearing at the Palace during the scorching summer of 1931. It was literally dazzling with potential stars. All such good performers, they were held over for a record eight weeks. Lou Holtz was master of ceremonies and William Gaxton, now biggest star in the constellation, had a lesser spot on the program. Kate Smith was there. Also Lyda Roberti and Harold Arlen, who wrote that radio monotony, "Stormy Weather."

PREHISTORIC CONSERVATION

By J. H. Galbraith

The late Dr. W. C. Mills, curator of the Museum of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society, and director of many explorations of village sites of the mound builders in the state, drew interesting deductions and conclusions regarding these prehistoric people, as to their habits and manner of living. For one thing he felt sure they took care to preserve their game stocks. In one exploration made at the Baum billage site it was found that 50 Virginia deer remains, 48 were male deer. This it was thought could hardly have just happened. In the interest of conservation of this chief game supply the hunters had avoided as much as possible killing the female deer. This is exactly what is done in the hunting regulation of Ohio now as to the killing of pheasants. Hunters are permitted to kill the cocks but not the hens in the short open season.

Behind The News In

Washington And Wall Street

BY GEORGE DURNO

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Just in case it hasn't been made clear to you elsewhere a complete "new deal" belatedly is taking place in the U. S. Treasury department.

That means all of the lads who subscribe to what are popularly known as Wall Street ideas on money and finance are being tossed out of their jobs just as fast as loyal subjects can be found to replace them.

When President Roosevelt and Acting Secretary Morgenthau get through with the Treasury an organization will remain that is 100 per cent in accord with the administration's monetary policy.

Don't be surprised at further sudden resignations and replacements. They're definitely on the cards.

At the risk of hazarding a guess Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Thomas Hewes, in charge of fiscal offices, is not for long in this vale of gold and silver tears. It is not meant to single Hewes out. He is only one of quite a few of the old order scheduled to go.

Leake

It may sound like rank heresy for one newspaper reporter to say Morgenthau was not trying to muzzle the press with his unfortunate anti-trust order while many others of the profession are insisting that was his motive.

Nevertheless, it's true. The new Treasury boss was only trying to seal up what had become a veritable sieve of information leaks to Wall Street brokerage houses.

Morgenthau concedes he approached the problem in a rather amateurish fashion. Astute administration publicists men are ironing out the injured feelings of the Treasury correspondents as best they can.

President Roosevelt first discovered that all was not going well in the Treasury department under the regime of Woodin and Acheson (the latter being in control because of the former's illness) when he found that New York financial houses were far better informed than was the public through the press.

A quiet investigation disclosed that a closely knit ring of subordinates was as out of line with the administration's gold manipulation policy as was Dean Acheson.

The White House moved swiftly to remove the gnawing from its breast. Among other things it was decided that news should emanate through the newspapers and not the unfriendly gentlemen of Broad and Wall.

If you have any doubt about this take a look at the corridors of the Treasury building. Moving men are very busy these days. Offices are being moved from points of vantage to those of disadvantage. Some are being moved clear out on the curb.

Also an effort is being made to sweep out a lot of red tape.

Safeguards

Henry Morgenthau Jr. was put into control of our national finances with one definite charge. He was to see that January 1 should come and go with no undue wabbles in the banking structure.

On the first of the year the Deposit Insurance corporation becomes operative. On a somewhat restricted basis it is designed to guarantee your bank deposits against what happened to them last March.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation has been attempting to subscribe to preferred stock of many banks, largely to strengthen the capital structure of the weak or institutions so they can become eligible for the protection guarantee.

Small banks have feared to enter into the scheme. They said it would be an admission of weakness which might start runs. When the large banks were approached to act as bell-wethers, their reaction was that the government was trying to get a hand-hold on their operation by becoming a stockholder.

Dovetailing into this situation is the administration's efforts to thaw out a number of the banks that have remained frozen since last March's monetary holiday.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor has been working valiantly on this liquidation which would re-open your dormant accounts.

But here again a fear of the motives of the R. F. C., which is handling the direct refinancing, enters into the picture.

Mr. Smith

At this point, Tom K. Smith should be introduced. You will recall him as the St. Louis banker whom Morgenthau made personal adviser on banking problems.

Smith has been working night and day all this week to get a true slant on the deposit insurance and liquidation situations. A report to the new Acting Secretary may be expected Monday.

Morgenthau is seeking an accurate slant on his new problems. When he finds out what is impending in the administration program you may look for some positive action.

Censor-Hound

One fellow got tossed into a tough spot as a result of the Treasury flare-up over press censorship. That was Louis Ruppel, Deputy Commissioner of Narcotics.

Until last March Ruppel was a New York newspaper man who had traveled with Mr. Roosevelt since the pre-convention days when everybody rode a lower berth. Morgenthau asked him as an old friend to step in and pry some of his erstwhile colleagues off the Treasury's neck.

Lou crossed his fingers prayerfully and went to the assistance of Herbert Gaston, Assistant to the Acting Secretary in charge of Publicity.

By JAMES McMILLIN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The New York-Washington sound money fight is setting the stage for a huge civil war in New York itself. The stake will be financial leadership of the metropolis, and all that goes with it in the way of power and prestige.

On one side Rockefeller interests with the Chase bank as spearhead. On the other the Morgans battling to hold their place in the sun and still powerful despite rebuffs. The feud between them is due to pass from sniping to a major engagement.

You might think the Wigan revelations would have cramped the Chase's style. Not at all. Aldrich's finale to the Chase hearing is planned to leave a sweeter taste in Washington mouths and also fling a hot gauntlet in the teeth of New York's financial overlords.

Thinly veiled old line sponsorship of the sound money campaign gives the Rockefeller forces the break for which they have been waiting. They will fly the New Deal flag at their masthead. You haven't heard the Chase complaining about monetary policies and you won't.

Allies

Most of the banking community will string along with the Morgans—partly because of the magic of the name is still potent and partly because of privately expressed distaste for Rockefeller methods. The Stock Exchange crowd is less unsteady the Morgan spell, but its leaders are mostly inclined to play traditional leadership on the nose.

Also there will be some pretty important industrial backing in this army. But don't get the idea the Rockefeller will be without allies. Watch the Du Ponts. They have successfully avoided the path of New Deal storms and there is no love lost between them and the Morgans. They also have ambitions. John J. Rasch is more in the picture than is generally supposed. It is no accident that he visited Warm Springs while his erstwhile candidate, Al Smith, was sounding off about the "baloney dollar."

A Rockefeller - Aldrich, Chase - Standard Oil-Du Pont-General Motors setup—however informal—could make giant money combinations of the past look like pygmies.

Convert

Al Smith's espousal of orthodox money was hardly a surprise. He has played very close to the bankers - which includes Morgan bankers - since 1928. His County Trust Co. just missed the front pages before it was absorbed recently.

Wall Street would have considered Al a perfectly safe candidate in 1932. He had secret backing of some importance at Chicago - not that it did him any good. Moreover he has been helped over financial rough spots a couple of times by "established financial interests."

This doesn't imply that Al has "sold out" to the bankers. Wall Street methods are more subtle than that. He has simply inhaled their point of view to an extent where he is now one of them.

Tichenor - publisher of the New Outlook and LaGuardia's comrade on his vacation trip - harks back to the Morgan office. Those astute people are believed to have helped Smith to his editorship. Now the New Outlook needs glasses and Al is a bitter man than ever.

Splits

The division of opinion in New York on the President's gold policy is growing sharper every day. The President's program is gaining converts. A top-flight brokerage house recently turned heretic enough to state that bondholders have no cause for dismay if their purchasing power does revert to the 1926 level and reminds them that they thought they were pretty well off then.

Another reason for Wall Street's shifting base is the slump in stock and commodity prices that follows every time sound money ideas seem to be getting the upper hand. The boys do like their profits and if jacking the price of gold will bring them they're for it.

Tactics

Sponsors of the orthodox money program have decided it isn't so bright to attack the President directly. From now on their tactics will assume that the President himself is O. K. but his professional advisers are cock-eyed and won't please him with the bum's rush.

Neutral observers comment that if and when he does it will not be on New York advice.

Stabilization

Local observers think they see signs of informal cooperation with Great Britain for stabilization. They expect it to take place within the next remote future around the old parities for dollar and sterling. But gold prices for both will be higher than formerly.

One school of experts says that the longer this is postponed the more likely it is that other issues will arise to make for a lower instead of a higher price for gold than that which now prevails.

Sidelights

The sound moneyites drew their bitterest disappointment in the rejection accorded Al Smith's views.

They never expected to see the day when he was holed in his home town. . . Father Coughlin won a one-round knockout over the Crusaders in his meeting the same night. . . He drew thousands more people and more less jeers. . . You hear talk in some quarters about tossing in the sponge.

The Sunlit Road

"As dew to the blooms, and bud to the bee, as scent to the rose, are these memories to me."

By TOM T. JONES

It is now almost 100 years since East Liverpool was elevated from a hamlet into a village, a momentary departure in its existence, which went far in contributing to its subsequent status as a city. The event, outstanding in its history, occurred in 1834. The residents of the local community were additionally gladdened in that year when in the annual December message to congress, President Andrew Jackson announced that, with the beginning of 1835, the country's public debt would be liquidated, leaving a substantial balance in the treasury.

On December 1, 1834, President Jackson, then in the middle of his second term, said that the revenue from all sources that year would total $20,624,717. He announced that by the first of the following year with remaining debts paid the sum of $140,000 would still be on hand.

It was in 1834 that much controversy ensued over the United States bank a committee from the senate investigated it early in that year. There were then more than 500 state banks in the country. The custom at the time was for the government to deposit revenue in banks selected by the treasury.

It was declared of them by historians that neither the banks thus made custodians of governmental moneys or those unselected for this purpose were under any sort of supervision by the state which chartered them or by the federal government. Thus, it was declared, "no bank notes had any certainty of value."

President Jackson also notified congress in his 1834 message that "the progress of gold coinage is creditable." He added: "If several states shall be induced to reform their banking system and probable issue of small notes was shall in a few years have a currency as sound and as little liable to fluctuations as any other commercial country."

He also said "the army is in a high state of discipline." He concluded that "free from public debt, at peace with all of the world and with no complications in our intercourse with foreign powers" the country could settle down to simplifying the federal government and with economy go in for consideration of domestic problems.

LaFayette Honored

It was in the year that East Liverpool became a village that General Lafayette passed away in France. He was declared to have been the last surviving major general of the Revolutionary war. Much of that year was devoted to General Lafayette's memory by President Jackson and congress. When he succumbed on May 19, 1834 the news evidently in those days did not reach Washington for nearly a month. It was on June 21, 1834 that President Jackson gave out a general order in which he ordered that the same honor be accorded his memory by military posts and naval stations as was given President Washington at his passing in 1799.

"Lafayette was a citizen of France, but he was the distinguished friend of the United States," he then declared. "His memory will be second only to that of Washington in the hearts of the American people." People in the new village of East Liverpool then read also the added affirmation of President Jackson regarding Lafayette: "He came in his youth to defend our country; he came again in the maturity of his age to witness its growth in all its elements of prosperity."

Later, the new villagers hereabouts, read the letter which George Washington Lafayette, son of the deceased Frenchman, sent to President Jackson in which he attested that according to the will of Lafayette, he was sending to the United States government for deposit in its library a copy of the declaration of independence that had been engraved upon a copper plate and given him which he in turn bequeathed to the Congressional library.

In his letter to President Jackson this son of Lafayette mentioned that he was also the adopted grandson of George Washington for whom he had been named. John Bell of Tennessee, one of the men who ran against Abraham Lincoln for the presidency was the speaker of the house of representatives in 1834 and Martin Van Buren was the vice president when President Jackson officially notified them of the passing of Lafayette and this provision of his will.

Letter Sent to Son

So it came to pass that in the year when East Liverpool reached a village status members of both houses of congress were mourning on their sleeves for 30 days. The halls of both bodies carried mourning decorations until the end of that session. Upon the final day of that year, December 31, 1834, John Quincy Adams, then 67, the sixth President, and then a member of congress, delivered to both houses, at their request, an address on the life and character of Lafayette.

A resolution was passed also by congress which was sent to George Washington Lafayette expressing regret at his father's passing and carrying sentiments of appreciation for that done by him for the independence of the American people. He, replying, maintained that the grandchildren of Lafayette should read it daily since this resolution had been placed in the room in which they had been accustomed to receiving the advice of their grandfather. He also stated in his letter of acknowledgement of the resolution of the "The affectionate esteem of a free nation is the most desirable reward that can be obtained on earth."

It was just a month after the close of the year in which East Liverpool became a village that an attempt to assassinate President Andrew Jackson was made by a man who was declared to have been insane.

Mayors Confer Today.

Mayors of seven of Ohio's largest cities planned to meet in the capital today to assay the future of liquor control and to determine how it will help fill out their coffers with tax revenues.

And the Buckeye State, still waiting at the junction, could console itself with the knowledge that legal minds differed over whether state constitutional prohibition was at an end today.

Some experts said the state amendment had actually been killed when Ohio voted it down, Nov. 7, or at least when the official count was announced a couple of days later. Others held the repeal became effective on the 30th day after the election, or at 12:01 a. m. today. And still others held that the repeal became effective after the 30th day after election, or one minute after midnight tonight.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 7.—A transportation tangle affecting the territory between Columbus and Port Clinton was cleared today by an Ohio supreme court decision granting the Buckeye Stages company authority to operate between those two points.

Delaware, Bucyrus, Marion and Sandusky are among the cities gaining a unified transit service by the ruling.

Abandonment of service by the Columbus, Delaware and Marion Traction company, was followed by issuance of permits to various companies to serve the territory. The court decision reduced the state utilities commission authorization to the Buckeye stages.

GETS OLD JOB BACK
NEW YORK — Harry Olden is back on the job. He is manager of a department store's liquor shop, the same position he had before prohibition. He's been with the store 35 years.

Yesterday, just before he opened the shop to sell legal liquor, some one asked him what he did in the store during prohibition.
"I handled rugs," he replied.

Colloquially, narrow sand strips paralleling the coast of North Carolina are referred to as "banks," and residents of those isolated bits of land are called "bankers."

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 7.—Well, sir, from what I can read and hear today, folks stood the shock of getting a drink (without giving their name), in mighty good shape. Course the ones that are clear "out" we won't hear of for days. But it looked like everything went off better than expected.

You see, the whole problem is setting people from bad drinks, back onto good drinks. You take a good bucking horse rider, he would rather ride a bad horse than a nice, gentle one. So it's going to take time to get 'em to having a sociable drink without watching the door.

Yours,
Will Rogers

COAL BURNING ON HILLSIDE

Ohio Bureau of Mines Asked to Extinguish Menacing Blaze Near Salineville.

LIBON—Unless immediate action is taken to extinguish a coal fire in a hillside near Salineville, serious results can be anticipated, County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk announced today. The state bureau of mines at Columbus has been informed of the danger.

Recently boys dug some crop coal from the hillside, and while engaged in this task, built a fire against the side of the hill and the wall of crop coal. Kirk urged the Columbus department to send inspectors into the county, and in the event CWA workers can be used to dig around the burning coal to extinguish the fire, a crew will be immediately assigned.

Fifty Inspectors Wage Battle Against Gasoline Bootleggers

State Tax Commission Fights Attempts to Dilute Motor Fuel With Kerosene.

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7.—Ohio's war on gasoline tax evasions is fought on a dozen "fronts" by half a hundred inspectors but to mother nature goes the credit for the greatest victories.

One of the major problems of the state tax commission is the dilution of gasoline with kerosene, a cheaper and lower taxed product, but the elements care for that problem about six months out of the year.

Motors just won't start on diluted gasoline in the cold months and the dealer who "cheats the state through dilution" defeats his own purpose, says C. E. Black, head of the gasoline tax division.

Purchaser Soon Learns "In most cases," he explains, "the purchaser of diluted gas soon learns it does not give satisfactory operation and he won't return."

Gasoline in Ohio bears a four cents a gallon tax. Kerosene is taxed at the rate of one cent.

For the most part, Ohio has little gasoline bootlegging, tax commission officials report. The taxes are collected on a check of gasoline handled by pipe lines, trucks, railroads and inland water tankers.

The state tax commission has between 40 and 50 inspectors on the job all the time checking the imports, the refiners and the dealers. A corps of officials maintains a constant check of the lake boats docking and departing at ports along the Great Lakes, another group checks boats plying the Ohio river ports.

State Lines Guarded The state's only mobilized group of inspectors holds the lines between Ohio and Pennsylvania by virtue of a reciprocal agreement. Fourteen men are in this contingent and they make constant checks of trucks plying between the states. On the other side of the border the Pennsylvania state police perform similar functions.

An exchange of reports between Ohio and Pennsylvania on the volume of gasoline imported and exported gives both states an accurate check on the fuel to be taxed, the commission explained.

The tax commission makes no estimate of the taxes lost by means of "bootleg" gasoline or diluted fuel but they say confidently it is relatively small, especially in the winter.

Highway Patrol Aids Another arm of the state government—the state highway department—is providing additional forces for combating the tax evasion. The new state highway patrol checkup on fuel tank operations is one, and the highway departments new testing engine for gasoline is the second.

The testing motor was installed in the highway laboratory primarily for a check up on the quality of fuel supplied for motor vehicles of the department but O. W. Merrill, director said it would be used for checking samples of fuel where dilution was suspected by state highway patrolmen or tax commission inspectors.

Stamping out the bootlegging reflects to the interests of the highway department in increased revenues as the majority of the gasoline taxes accrue to the benefit of the construction and maintenance funds of the department.

COLUMBIA.

James Dunn, Lillian Roth, Cliff Edwards, June Knight, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Lillian Bond.

Dorothy Lee and Lona Andre constitute the extraordinarily brilliant cast of "Take a Chance," the Paramount musical extravaganza produced by Laurence Schwab, which comes on Friday to the Columbia theater.

The new picture must not be characterized as a backstage romance. It runs the gamut from a carnival side-show, through a swanky New York gambling club, out to the homes of Long Island's millionaire society folk and back to Broadway.

Dunn and Edwards are cast as side-show spellers who are not averse to making away with their patrons' pocketbooks and watches, when the occasion offers. Miss Roth and Miss Knight are entertainers at the show. The former finally abandons her friends because of their petty grating and goes to New York where she wins fame on Broadway.

The two spellers are finally induced by June, and the long arm of the law, to go straight. The three set out for New York to make their fortunes in a legitimate manner. At first they are caught in the toils of Robert Gleckler, who plays the part of the owner of a crooked gambling club, but through the good offices of Miss Roth and her producer, played by Charles "Buddy" Rogers, they escape.

There are a number of hilarious sequences made against the background of a society club bazaar at a swanky Long Island estate and also something entirely new, a goofy travelogue, a la Graham McNamee, which forms a background for one of Cliff Edwards' clever ukelele numbers.

All ends happily after Dunn, Edwards and Miss Knight win great acclaim as members of Rogers' new show.

AMERICAN.

Except for the introductory action, which takes place in a metropolitan hotel, the entire story of "The Important Witness," one of the two full-length screen pictures which opened Wednesday at the American theater, is laid on a trans-continental bus.

The other feature at the American is "Holiday," the vehicle starring Ann Harding and which boasts a cast that includes Mary Astor, Edward Everett Horton, Robert Ames and Hedda Hopper.

In "The Important Witness," Noel Francis, a public stenographer, witnesses a gangster murder as she is taking dictation in Robert Ellis' room.

The gangsters kidnap her for fear that she may be able to identify them later, and Dorothy Burgess is suspected of the crime. Joel escapes from the gangsters and boards a passing bus. Donald Dillaway, the driver, knows her and is anxious to help her.

They race to the end of Dillaway's run, reaching the bus terminal shortly before the gangsters who are pursuing them in another car. Dillaway continues on the bus as a passenger, and the gangsters board the bus, unknown to the fugitives.

In a slam-bang finish, the bus tears into Los Angeles, leaving most of the passengers gasping for breath.—R. S. E.

Polar Expedition Will Establish Base 400 Miles South of Little America.

By The Associated Press.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 7.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, probably will sail for the south pole next Tuesday.

As it is too early for his flagship to approach the ice barrier, Admiral Byrd plans to carry out his oceanographic work on a wooden vessel which will precede his flagship through the ice.

The main camp of the expedition will be in Little America, where hope is still held that a plane left by the admiral's last south pole expedition, will be found.

An advance base will be established 400 miles south of Little America, where two men will spend the winter in the world's loneliest outpost, observing weather conditions.

SIX DISTRICT QUINTS START SEASONS FRIDAY

Opening Card Has 7 Games

Salineville, Columbiana, New Waterford Play 2 Frays.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Salineville at Lisbon.
New Waterford at Columbiana.
Lectonia at Boardman.
Bergholz at Irondale.

SATURDAY NIGHT

Delroy at Salineville.
Columbiana at Canfield.
Darlington at New Waterford.

By ROBERT ELLIOTT

Six of the East Liverpool district's 13 high school basketball teams will play open their 1933-34 seasons in a program of seven contests this weekend. One team—Fairfield Centralized—opened last week by losing an 18-12 verdict to Mineral Ridge.

Three teams will open their seasons next week. East Liverpool scheduled to face Youngstown Chaney here, is the only district team to open the week of Dec. 22. East Palestine waits until Dec. 23 to play its opening contest, while Chester isn't scheduled to see action until after the first of the year. The schedule of the Hancock county team, at present, is incomplete.

Four Tilts Friday

The six teams opening their seasons this weekend are Lisbon, Salineville, New Waterford, Columbiana, Lectonia and Irondale. Three of these, Salineville, Columbiana and New Waterford, will play both Friday and Saturday nights. The other three engage in Friday night games only.

Wellsville, Salem and Midland open next week, playing all their games between each other. Wellsville travels to Salem on Friday night, Dec. 15, and on Saturday night, Midland travels to Wellsville for a tussle with Dave Evans' potentially powerful Bengal quint.

Four battles are billed for tomorrow night with the battle between Salineville and Lisbon at the county seat, looking like the best bet. Both teams have several lettermen back from their last year's outings, but Lisbon looks to be the better outfit by at least 10 points. Coach Phil Biele at Lisbon is ready to put an all-veteran quint on the floor against Bill Lange's hopefuls.

Important Tilt Dec. 15
Three old rivalries crop out in the trio of Saturday night offerings. Delroy and Salineville didn't meet last year, but their tilt this season looks like it should be a tussle. Salineville fans with plenty of action. Columbiana may make it two straight for the weekend at Canfield's expense while anything can happen in the Darlington-New Waterford set.

The district fans will watch with interest the Salem-Wellsville scrap in the Quaker City a week from tonight. With only John Snediker missing from last year's quint, Wellsville should test the Quakers, defending county and district champs, to the limit.

Salem will be starting its first season under the coaching of Bill Brown, former Ohio State star, who replaces Floyd Stone.

Pocket Billiard Champ Defeated

Greenleaf Suffers First Defeat in Three Years.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The world's pocket billiard tournament was in a state of turmoil today following the sensational defeat of the defending champion, Ralph Greenleaf of New York, 125 to 85 in 25 innings, by George Kelly of Philadelphia.

The stunning upset occurred last night and knocked Greenleaf 12 times champion, out of a five-way tie for first place and gave the winner his first victory in the tournament. It was the champ's first defeat in three years and last night it hadn't seemed possible to the other contestants that he could lose.

However, Greenleaf had his moment of glory when in the 15th inning he had a run of 51 to topple Kelly's best efforts a few innings later by amassing a high run of 30. As matters stood today Erwin Rudolph of Cleveland; Andrew Ponzi of Philadelphia; James Caras of Wilmington, Del., and Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., were left alone in the undefeated class with one victory apiece.

Big Ten May Open Doors to Notre Dame or Michigan State

COACHING STAFF "HAPPY FAMILY"

By The Associated Press.
LINCOLN, Neb.—One of the "happiest families" in the football coaching realm is the University of Nebraska triumvirate, just now chuckling over the Huskers' third straight Big Six championship.

Dana X. Bible, who has won four conference titles in the five seasons since he came here from Texas A. & M., is always, shutting off much of the credit for his team's success onto the shoulders of Henry F. "Indian" Schulte and H. W. Browne, line and backfield coaches respectively.

Strong for D. X.

But Schulte, former Nebraska head football and track coach, snorts at this "back-passing" and insists "it's all Bible" when friends are singing their praises, while Browne is likewise "strong for D. X."

It has been an extra thrill for Browne to assist with this year's team, as four boys who played together on his championship Lincoln high school eleven brought their three-year varsity careers to an end this fall. They were George Henry Sauer, fullback; Bernie Masterson, quarter; Bruce Kilbourne, end, and Clair Bishop, guard.

Schulte builds lines
Schulte's specialty is line play and he's more than done his part in building sturdy lines for the Cornhuskers these three seasons. Neuritis had him crippled this fall, but he was on deck daily to advise and suggest, even though he couldn't actually show the Scarlet athletes how to shove each other around, as he had in former years.

A specialty of Browne's is a set of linbering-up exercises. The Nebraska players go through them before every workout and every game, and to them Bible attributes much of the Cornhusker success in avoiding injuries this season.

One of the least publicized but most highly successful football coaches in the country is Dana X. Bible, whose Nebraska eleven capped a great season by routing Oregon State. He and his two assistants, "Indian" Schulte and H. W. Browne, are a harmonious trio.

Pitchers Paced By Hubbell

Carl Allows Only 1.6 Earned Runs a Game.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The brilliant pitching that carried the New York Giants' "hitless" team to the 1933 world championship is emphasized more than ever in the official pitching averages of the National league.

Led by Carl Hubbell the entire Giant mound staff appeared well up in the list as based on the earned run averages.

Hubbell allowed an average of only 1.6 earned runs per nine inning game while hurling 309 innings, the equivalent of more than 34 full contests. Not since 1923 had any National league hurler been under two in the earned run averages.

Behind Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, the big youngster from Dodgeville, N. Y., was third with a 2.15 average; Fred Fitzsimmons was 11th at 2.89 and Leroy (Bud) Parmelee was 16th at 3.18.

The Chicago Cubs were the leading threats to the Giants' supremacy as Lon Warneke, the 1932 leader, took second place with a 2.01 average; Guy Bush was fourth with 2.59 and Curley Root fifth 2.60.

In the percentages of games won and lost, Hubbell, with 23 victories to 12 defeats for a .657 mark, was behind. Lyle Tinning of Chicago, led with a .684 average from 13 victories and six defeats and Ben Cantwell of Boston was second with 20 games won and 10 lost for .667. Hubbell's 23 victories set the high mark for the year, as did his 309 innings pitched.

Jerome (Dizzy) Dean of St. Louis shared the season's individual honors with the New York southpaw. He set a new "modern" record for strikeouts in a single game by whiffing 17 Chicago batters on July 30. The best previous mark since 1900 was 16, made by Christy Mathewson, Nap Rucker and Frank Hahn. "Dizzy" fanned 199 rivals in the course of 48 games, year, and tied with Warneke for the league lead by pitching 26 complete games.

IRISH GRIDDERS CHOOSE CAPTAIN
By The Associated Press.
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 7.—Notre Dame's surprising football campaign of 1933 is over, but the name of the team's captain won't be known until tonight.

Coach Hearty "Hunk" Anderson named a different captain for each game during the season just past, but tonight the players name their permanent leader for the year at a private dinner given them by the athletic association. Ed Krause, star tackle from Chicago, was regarded as a favorite.

Country's Colleges Continue Old "Fire the Coach" Tradition

Two Head Mentors Already Replaced, While Five Others Resign; Willaman Under Fire.

By ALAN GOULD, Associated Press Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Coaching heads have already begun to drop into the basket, in keeping with the traditional college custom of demanding a reckoning at the close of a disastrous campaign or a periodic house-cleaning on general principles.

The mortality rate for 1933 apparently will be as high as ever, even though the demands for high-pressure production are less conspicuous than they were when put under the Carnegie Foundation's microscope a few years ago. Upward of a dozen head coaches so far have been involved in shake-ups or prospective changes at larger colleges or universities. The list may have doubled before the head-hunting season closes.

Head coaches at Texas A. & M. and Lehigh already have been replaced. Others have resigned at Dartmouth, Texas, Kentucky, Boston university and South Dakota State. More or less under fire. Speculation meanwhile has been rife over possible changes at North Carolina, Auburn and Rice in the south, Yale and New York university in the east, Notre Dame, Indiana, Purdue, Ohio State, Missouri and Wisconsin in the middle west.

Chief interest centered nearly all season in the possible shake-up at Notre Dame. Support for Hunk Anderson, who succeeded Knute Rockne, has rallied since Notre Dame's exciting last-game victory over the Army but the feeling persists that a change is likely. The name of Noble Kizer of Purdue, has been most often linked with the job despite denials.

Yale shifted coaches a year ago. With Redie Root replacing Dr. Marvin Stevens, as head coach. But Eli alumni have been disappointed by the results.

At Ohio State the student newspaper as well as the "downtown" coaches were demanding the scalp of Sam Willaman, head of the school's football destinies for the last five years. There apparently was no objection to Willaman's record as his teams have been defeated only twice in two years. But they insist he is "not a leader of men." Willaman's team was defeated only by Michigan this year, while it beat such teams as Illinois, Pennsylvania, Northwestern and Vanderbilt.

In brief here are some of the other coaching situations:
Kentucky—Harry Gamage resigned. Latest indicated candidates include John J. McEwan, former Army star who resigned last year as Holy Cross coach; Chet Wynne of Auburn, and Elmer Layden of Duquesne.

Cannell Resigns
Dartmouth—Jackson Cannell resigned, after outbreak of undergraduate criticism. No action on possible successor.
Indiana—E. C. (Billy) Hayes may take over athletic directorship and seek own successor as head football coach.

Lehigh—Austin Tate succeeded by Glen Harshorn, former Purdue star and assistant to Noble Kizer for last two years at that institution.

University of California at Los Angeles—Rumors that Bill Spaulding may be replaced, so far denied. Wisconsin—Dr. C. W. Spears apparently slated to retain job despite earlier reports of dissatisfaction.

Missouri—Frank Carideo, former All-American quarterback at Notre Dame, under fire after disastrous season.
Harmon Relieved
New York University—Under graduate discussion and criticism of "de-emphasis" under present regime, with Howard Cann as head coach, but no indication of any change in policy or coaching staff.

Chicago Merger Planned

Proposed Move Would Unite Northwestern And Chicago.

By PAUL MICKELSON, Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The door may be opened for either Notre Dame, Nebraska, Michigan State or Marquette to join the Western Athletic conference, better known as the Big Ten, before another football season rolls around.

Proposed plans to merge the University of Chicago and Northwestern university, a move that would automatically reduce the conference's membership to nine and leave a spot open, were reported progressing to rapidly today that the consolidation may be effected by the time the 1934 fall term opens.

Under the merger plan, Northwestern would become strictly an undergraduate school, and Chicago would revert to a post graduate university. Graduates aren't allowed to compete in college football in the Big Ten so the football players would all go to Northwestern.

Of the four probable candidates for membership in the Big Ten, Michigan State was regarded as the most probable choice of the conference leaders. Nebraska was considered too far removed from conference territory as well as belonging to the Big Six; the old feud between Fielding H. Yost of Michigan and the late Knute K. Rockne, probably would block Notre Dame's request for admission, whereas Marquette's football team last season was far below Big Ten standard.

Michigan State for years has been one of the real strong teams of American football, holding Michigan's championship teams of 1930 and '31 to scoreless ties.

If the Northwestern-Chicago merger is effected by next fall, prospects are that the Big Ten will proceed as the "Big Nine" at least until 1935 as all football schedules for 1934 are completed.

Gridiron Season Claims 36 Lives

Decrease Noted From 1932; 16 School Fatalities.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A record of progress was marked up today in the efforts to check the deaths caused by football as a survey made by The Associated Press revealed only 36 deaths directly attributable to the game during the 1933 season.

Last year a similar survey showed 38 football deaths. In 1931 there were fifty.

Ten more deaths may be partly charged against the game but are considered doubtful. In these cases doctors said football injuries may have been contributing factor.

High schools again showed the greater number of fatalities, 16, and "sandlot" games were next with 13 deaths. Not one college varsity player died as the result of football injuries and only two college freshmen are listed as having died of injuries that could be traced to supervised games of practice.

The 36 deaths, including the 10 "doubtful" fatalities, are classified as follows: College 5; high school 16; sandlot 13; semi-pro and athletic clubs 2.

GOLF NOT TO CHANGE RULES

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Although the revised amateur code adopted by the ruling body of British golf, the Royal and Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, is even stricter than the one now in effect in America, there is little possibility that the United States Golf association will make any changes in its present rulings when it meets here in January.

John G. Jackson, vice-president of the U. S. G. A., said that the executive committee would consider the British code, adopted a few days ago and forwarded here for information, when it meets before the annual convention but that he knew of no agitation to make the American rule conform.

The only teams which definitely have signed contracts to play East Liverpool next year in football are Salem, Martins Ferry, Lisbon and Toronto. All except Lisbon are completing the second half of a two-year agreement next season. Salem and Toronto will be met on their fields, while Martins Ferry and Lisbon will come here. Lisbon's Blue Devils will again open the local season, probably on the last week-end of September. Faculty Manager J. M. Decker revealed that Midland, New Philadelphia and Cleveland Holy Name would probably be asked to return here in 1934 on the same dates as were in effect during the season just finished. Wellsville, Canton McKinley and East Palestine, the other three teams met by the Ceramics this year, have not signed contracts for the 1934 season.

If Tom Dixon's cagers can come through with a county basketball championship this season, it will be the first time in many years that the Potters have been able to annex both the county gridiron and floor titles in one athletic campaign. The Ceramics will undoubtedly be favored in the county basketball race, but their path to the crown which they held season before last is anything but easy. On paper, which at its best is most unreliable, we see the county's "Big Five" finishing in the following order: East Liverpool, Salem, Wellsville, East Palestine and Lisbon. All five are exceptionally strong, however, and capable of registering a victory at the most unexpected time. Wellsville's all-veteran aggregation looms as the "dark horse" of the 1933-34 county floor campaign.

East coaches seem fairly well divided in their opinion regarding the selection of Columbiana university by Leland Stanford as its Rose Bowl opponent on New Year's Day. The mentors are unanimous in their belief that Pitt was the logical choice, but Stanford can be well excused for not choosing the Smoky City club, when the Panthers' past performances in Rose Bowl games are considered. As far as their "first" teams are considered, Columbiana apparently has little to fear from Tiny Thornhill's eleven. However, in the matter of reserve strength the Lions rank a bad second and it is this difference in the two teams that will likely decide the outcome of the annual classic. It will be worthwhile to see how much interest can be worked up in the Columbiana-Stanford combat. Personally, I'd hate to drive to Pittsburgh to see it.

For the first time in many years the various scribes throughout the county came fairly close to being unanimous in their all-county high school football selections. Every scribe's backfield was composed of Earl Tipton, Bill Booth, Harry Rose and Fred Springer. Wellsville replaced Charley Pack at end with Bill Connell of the Bengals, but the Salem News used Pack and Snyder. Woody Price and Roy Jones were unanimous guard selections as was Paul Alexander of Salem at center. The tackles varied slightly, with Salem favoring Troy Cope over Frank Lovas. On the team chosen by The Review there were eight seniors and three juniors. The three-year men were Lovas, Pack and Springer. All three should come close to repeating next season.

And the attack on "Salem Sam" Willaman, head football coach at Ohio State university, continues. In a way it's rather pathetic to see sundry publications demanding Willaman's resignation because "he's not a developer of men." Sam's only difficulty was in losing to Michigan for two straight years, which is something the hard-to-please Columbus fans find extremely hard to digest. It doesn't matter, apparently, that Willaman won his nine other games this season, including frays from Northwestern, Illinois, Vanderbilt and Pennsylvania. Or that he's beaten Michigan in two of the five years he's been coach at Ohio State. It's all rather amusing to us, but probably rather disconcerting, to say the least, to Mr. Willaman. It's things like this that make the world go 'round, however, so save on all ye faithful.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 7.—Phil Heil of Cincinnati was adjudged the most valuable player on the 1933 football team of the University of Cincinnati at a dinner last night. He played right end. Besides Williams and Heil they included Fred Yeager and George Smith, Mount Vernon; Franklin Ruck, Troy, and Robert Post and James Hall, Hamilton.

HUNTER FORGETS GUN
FAIRMONT, W. Va.—A hunting Frank Costello would go, and so off he went in his best hunting togs and with his hunting dogs. Five miles out on the Gratton highway, a filling station man waved him down, and told him he was wanted on the phone.

"If you want to shoot anything, you'd better come home and get your gun. You left it in the hall-way."

P. S.—He didn't get a deer.

Carnera And Baer May Sign

Both Due to Arrive in New York Within Month.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—With Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion, arriving next week from Italy, and Max Baer, his outstanding challenger, due in New York from California early next month, the possibility of their being matched for a title bout next June loomed bright today.

Carnera, already has signed with Madison Square Garden for a title defense any time the bout can be made.

Although holding the role of outstanding challenger, Baer's motion picture activities and his alliance with Jack Dempsey, rather than the Garden, have so far halted efforts to sign him for a title match.

Baer, when he comes here in January, is expected to appear for a month in a night club show, but recent advices are he will also be receptive to a garden offer to fight Carnera in June.

Another stumbling block, however, is the Garden's insistence that Baer must also sign to defend the title for the Garden if he wins it from Carnera, thus precluding any chance of Dempsey cornering the heavyweight championship market the Garden has held since Tex Rickard captured it with Dempsey himself.

THREE HURT IN SIX-DAY RACE

By The Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, Dec. 7.—Fred Ottaviano and Frank Bartell paced the field today in Cleveland's second six-day bicycle race after a series of spills had taken out the veteran Reggie McNamara and resulted in injuries to Jules Audy and Freddie Zach.

McNamara's right shoulder was broken shortly before midnight, less than three hours after the start of the race. Audy's leg was gashed and Zach's scalp was cut in the pile-up, but both continued. Sebastian Schmidt withdrew, his partner Tony Beckman joining with Norman Hill, McNamara's partner, to make a new team.

SCOUTS ASSET TO COMMUNITY

State Executive Tells Of Work at Lions Meeting.

In the last 24 years Boy Scouting has had a remarkable and beneficial effect on community life in America. H. W. Haun, regional scout executive of Columbus, declared in a talk at the Lions club meeting at the Mary A. Patterson memorial Wednesday night. His subject was "Vitality of the Boy Scout Movement."

The speaker was presented by A. L. McLain, chairman of the program. After the talk a brief business session was held in charge of President Guy Emmerling, when plans were made for a ladies' night program on Dec. 20.

Haun said in part: "The Boy Scout movement at the present time is composed of more than 600,000 active scouts, whose characters are shaped daily by 700 professional leaders and thousands of scoutmasters and others who give their time without remuneration."

"In the last 24 years, more than 6,000,000 boys have graduated from the scout movement. With the excellent training they have received, their influence on community life in America has been a wonderful thing."

"Boy Scouting is a huge game, designed for all types of boys to aid in their proper physical, mental, moral and spiritual development. There are no class or racial lines. Every boy that joins a scout troop is on a par with every other Scout, regardless of his former position or condition."

"The great need of the Boy Scout movement at the present time is for trained leaders. There are many thousands of boys who would like to become scouts, but we cannot handle them because we do not have the leaders."

OHIOAN SHOWS PRIZE STOCK

Wilmington Youth Wins Ribbon at Chicago Livestock Exposition With Sow.

By The Associated Press. CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Frank C. Oren of Wilmington, O., won a blue ribbon at the International Livestock exposition by exhibiting the grand champion Hampshire sow.

He also took first with a senior yearling sow, third with a senior yearling pig, second with an aged boar, third with an aged herd and second with an aged herd bred by the exhibitor.

Other Ohio winners included Ann Brothers of Trenton, showing Rambouillet sheep, who won a third place with a yearling ewe and third with an aged ram; and Maxwilton Farms, Mansfield, which captured third place with a senior shorthorn calf.

MOB RULE HIT BY ROOSEVELT

Nation Opposed to Lynchings President Says.

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—President Roosevelt is convinced the nation will not tolerate lynch law.

Speaking to the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America last night, he made plain his belief that America seeks a government of its own "that will be sufficiently strong to protect the prisoner and at the same time to crystallize a public opinion so clear that government of all kinds will be compelled to practice a more certain justice."

The younger generation, the President added, "is not content with preachings against that vile form of collective murder—lynch law."

In a rebuke, softened only by his failure to mention names, Mr. Roosevelt condemned "those in high places or in low who condone lynch law." Governor James Rolph of California recently gave verbal approval to the lynching of two kidnappers at San Jose.

The judicial function of government, the President reminded his listeners, is the protection of the individual and the community through quick and certain justice. That function, he added, in many places "has fallen into a sad state of disrepair."

"It must be part of our program to reestablish it," he said. Turning to a common objective of church and state, President Roosevelt described it as "a more abundant life."

Churches and governments, he said, can work hand in hand toward a new definition of prosperity—prosperity "socially controlled for the common good." He assured the council that it can be "a prosperity built on spiritual and social values rather than on special privilege and special power."

"From the bottom of my heart," the President said, "I believe that this beloved country of ours is entering upon a time of great gain. That gain can well include a greater material prosperity if we take care that it is a prosperity for a hundred and twenty million human beings and not a prosperity for the top of the pyramid alone."

Others reported as possible appointees are S. P. Bush of Columbus, secretary of the governor's advisory commission on liquor control, which recommended the control measure introduced by administration leaders; E. G. Matthews of Elyria, state prohibition commissioner, and Wellington T. Leonard of Mansfield, former member of the State Industrial commission.

SUSPECT HELD IN KILLING

Solution of Year-old Cleveland Murder Seen.

By The Associated Press. CLEVELAND, Dec. 7.—Police today planned their hopes of linking a suspect with the brutal slaying nearly a year ago of young Mrs. Ruth Gillmore Steese on the outcome of ballistic tests with a pistol they said was found in the suspect's car.

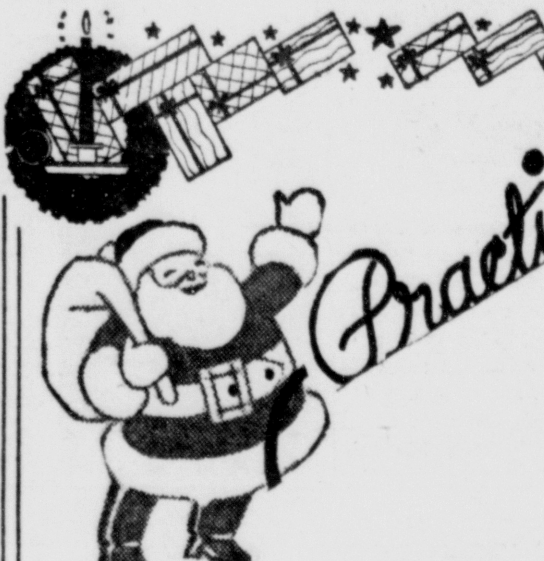

Officers who questioned a 39-year-old gasoline station attendant declared he had admitted "faking" a story of having been kidnapped, shot and robbed last July and added that a bullet taken from his leg at that time corresponded exactly with one taken from the body of Mrs. Steese.

The suspect's story of the robbery, shooting and kidnapping led to the arrest and conviction of Benjie Zeck of Pittsburgh, now being held in the county jail.

The body of Mrs. Steese, bookkeeper for the society for the blind, was found in the back seat of her automobile, in Beechwood village, on Dec. 30, 1932. She had been shot and robbed of about $150.

The man being held had been questioned by police before, but had not been definitely connected with the case until the pistol was found in his car late yesterday, shortly after he was arrested on a charge of issuing a check to defraud.

Y-INDUS CLUB TO MEET. Members of the Y-Indus club will hold their semi-monthly dinner-meeting at the Y. M. C. A. banquet hall tonight at 6 p. m. President William G. Parker will be in charge. A discussion will follow the dinner.

BACK MILLER FOR RUM POST

Former Cleveland Mayor May Be White's Selection for Liquor Control Commission.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7.—Ray T. Miller, former mayor of Cleveland, was a visitor in Columbus today, and his appearance gave rise to reports that he had strong backing for appointment by Governor George White as a member of the state liquor control commission, as yet to be created.

The administration's liquor control bill, now in committee, proposes a board of three members, each to be paid $10,000 a year. The commission would appoint a director who would receive a similar salary.

Others reported as possible appointees are S. P. Bush of Columbus, secretary of the governor's advisory commission on liquor control, which recommended the control measure introduced by administration leaders; E. G. Matthews of Elyria, state prohibition commissioner, and Wellington T. Leonard of Mansfield, former member of the State Industrial commission.

RETURNS HALF OF BAR CHICAGO—Mayor Edward J. Kelly took a tour about the loop to see how the legal liquor business was getting on, and noticed there was only half a bar in a central hotel.

That reminded him he had obtained the other half in 1919 and sent it to his summer home at Eagle River, Wis., where it was never set up.

"I am," he said to the hotel man, "going to return it to you so you'll have a whole bar."

CHICAGO LOSES SPEAKEASIES CHICAGO—Take the word of Chicago police officers for it—there are no speakeasies operating in Chicago, so far as could be learned.

The reason for this, they said, was because all the proprietors of the "speakeasies" bought 3.2 beer licenses under which they can sell "hard stuff" until Jan. 1, without additional license fees.

Chapter 26 THE SEANCE

Another voice answered Nesta's. "Yes, the storm's going over. It'll draw down river now."

Caroline had never heard this voice before, or any quite like it. It reminded her of a fly in treacle, or a voice heard in a thick muffling fog. It had a peculiar soft tonelessness that blurred the words, and the pitch never varied.

"Then we'd better get on with it," said Nesta. "That last crash put me right off—but I shall have a train to catch presently, and I've got to know about Jim before I go."

Caroline had taken another step, but these words halted her. She had not meant to listen, but when Nesta said, "I've got to know about Jim," she knew that she was going to listen. If there was anything to know about Jim, she was going to know it. She heard the soft sound of some one moving, and the gurgle of water or some other liquid. The smooth toneless voice said:

"Look into the pool."

"What shall I see? Suppose I don't see anything." This was Nesta.

"I don't say you'll see, nor what you'll see—there's no saying. If you don't see nothing, there's no harm done. Look in the pool."

Silence fell on the room—a curious silence, enclosed by the sound of restless, hurrying wind and distant thunder. It was like the still place at the center of the storm. Caroline edged forward and looked round the screen.

The room was full of a half light except for one bright patch—a light directed downwards upon a bowl of dark blue glass which appeared to be full of ink. It was about the size of a hyacinth bowl, and it stood on a stool with a worked cross-stitch top.

On one side of this stool Nesta Riddell was kneeling, and on the other, in a low armless chair sat a plump elderly woman. This must be the other Caroline—Caroline Bussell, Nesta Riddell's cousin, the housekeeper at Packham Hall.

She had a pale flat face, pale and plump, and a tight curled fringe of faded hair controlled by a net. Her hands lay in her lap. She leaned forward over them, watching Nesta.

There was no sound in the room at all, and the sound of the wind and the thunder was drowned in a steady downrush of rain. Time did not seem to pass; it stood still. Caroline stood still, with her hand on the edge of the screen. She looked at Nesta, and Nesta looked into the bowl of ink.

All at once the silence broke. Nesta said in her hard voice:

"I can't see anything but fog."

"Sometimes the fog comes first," said Caroline Bussell. "Maybe it'll clear away."

"There's nothing but fog!" Nesta's voice was fretful. She jerked back suddenly on to her heels.

"There's nothing but fog going up and down like waves—it makes me giddy. I'm not going to look any more. I didn't come all the way here to do the thing myself either."

Caroline Bussell spoke in her smooth voice.

"You've not got the patience—it needs patience. And you mustn't have your thoughts all churned up neither—you might as well go stirring up the mud in a pond and then expect to see clear to the bottom."

"Do it yourself!" said Nesta sulkily. "That's what I came here for. If I could do it, I'd have done it all home, and no need to come all this way."

Caroline Bussell leaned down and took up the bowl of ink. She set it in the hollow of her lap and drew the lamp so that the light shone upon it. All her movements were slow, smooth and noiseless. The light from the lamp shone down on the bowl of ink and on two pale, plump hands and a fold of smooth brown skirt. Nesta Riddell was just a shadow now.

Caroline began to feel afraid. The time seems endless before Caroline Bussell spoke, swaying forward a little.

"Ask—the fog is lifting."

Nesta knelt up. The movement brought her almost to the edge of the light again.

"Where's Jim? That's what I want to know. Where is he?"

Caroline Bussell began to speak slowly and monotonously.

"I see the fog lifting—waves breaking—a ledge on a cliff—he is on the ledge—"

"What's the good of that? That's the part I know! Come down to present day! Where is he now?"

Caroline Bussell put up her hand. Then she leaned over the bowl of ink. Her brooch caught the light. She spoke again.

"Windows—blue—windows—up to the ceiling and down to the floor—no, that's curtain—blue—narrow—like slits—windows like slits—"

"Narrow—one, two, three, four—I'm in the middle of the room—I must turn round—one, two, three, four, five—five narrow windows like slits—"

Caroline felt cold water run down her spine. Caroline Bussell wasn't looking into the ink pool now. The bowl was in her lap, but her hands had fallen; they hung straight down at her side like pale, heavy weights.

She had lifted her head, and sat stiffly upright with her eyes fixed on some point above Nesta's head. The light that struck upwards showed her eyes pale and set. Her lips hardly moved as she spoke.

"Five windows—like slits—"

That was the Blue Room at Hale Place he had said blue. How did she know? Cold drops kept running down Caroline's back.

"Is he there? Can you see him?" Nesta's voice was low but insistent.

"No—not there."

"What room is it? Why do you see it if he's not there?"

"He has been there—I can feel him there—I am in the room—I am turning in the room—I am counting the windows—one, two, three, four, five—five windows—like slits—and blue curtains—now the fireplace—deep hearth—china candlesticks—one of them is broken—I think he broke it—now the door—I am still turning—he came through the door—fear jumped out at him and he ran away—I am turning again—there is a bed set back in the wall—headpiece, footpiece, and four posts—the bed draws him—if he reaches it—no, not yet—not now—because of the other—"

Nesta leaned closer.

"What room is it? Where is it? Why do you keep on describing it? Where is it?"

Caroline Bussell sat silent.

"Can't you see where it is? You haven't told me anything at all."

"Eight—green—stones—"

Caroline Bussell.

Nesta made an abrupt movement.

"Where are they? In that room? Are they in that room?"

"Eight—green—"

"Eight—green—"

"You've counted them!" said Nesta angrily. "You don't need to start all that again! Get back to the stones! Where are the eight green stones?"

Caroline Bussell swayed from side to side. The white of her eyes showed all round the iris. Her voice dragged.

"Five windows—blue—count—one, two, three, four, five—head—door—bed—"

"Where are the emeralds?" said Nesta in a furious whisper.

Caroline Bussell gave a violent start. She said in a loud, heavy voice, "He's alive," and the bowl of ink tilted over. The ink ran down her brown skirt, soaking into it. The bowl slipped off her lap and broke.

Nesta jumped up with an angry exclamation, but after that one violent start Caroline Bussell sat quite still, blinking her eyes. She did not seem to notice the ink that was soaking into her dress. After a moment she said in a bewildered voice:

"Did you know that he was alive?"

Caroline took three steps backwards and opened the door. The dark winding stair was before her. She went down half a dozen steps on tiptoe, holding her breath, and then ran as if there were wolves behind her.

Your Health

By Dr. R. S. Copeland

NOTHING is more disconcerting to a young man than the realization that he is losing his hair. He resorts to any and every means to prevent baldness. It is a disfigurement of which no man is proud. It is true he becomes accustomed to it, but there is no doubt he casts an envious eye on his more fortunate brother who retains his hair. This is shown by the many inquiries that are made concerning the prevention of baldness and the many thousands of dollars that are spent annually on patent medicines and so-called "hair restorers."

I am often asked, "What is the cause of baldness?"

Many Theories.

It is due to atrophy or death of the hair follicles. Many theories have been advanced to explain this unwelcome affliction. Why one man will never be bald and another man will lose his hair prematurely, is a problem that has baffled us for many years.

Everybody knows that baldness is more common among men than women. But I wonder how many of my readers appreciate that baldness among women has become much more common since bobbed hair became the fashion. This seems to confirm an old belief that baldness among men can be traced to too close cropping of the hair. It is also believed that men are more susceptible to baldness than women for they do not comb and brush their hair as often as women do.

Tightly Fitted Hats.

To my mind, the wearing of heavy and close fitting hats is a factor in baldness. The blood vessels are constricted and the health and vigor-giving blood is kept from the hair roots.

Some authorities believe that baldness is a hereditary disease. Others regard it is the result of some disturbance of the scalp, such as dandruff, ringworm or eczema. It is probable that many constitutional diseases play an important role in the development of baldness.

I am confident that many cases of premature baldness could have been prevented if the victim had given proper attention to the hygiene and health of his scalp. Bear in mind that the scalp demands daily attention. Dandruff and other disturbances must be remedied before further loss of hair can be prevented.

Comb and brush your hair daily. The hair follicles should be stimulated by vigorous brushing and massaging of the scalp. Though I am not enthusiastic about tonics, they are of some value in that their use encourages massage of the scalp. Do not pour the tonic on the hair, but rub it in vigorously and thus improve the blood supply of the scalp.

Exposure of the hair to sunlight and air will stimulate the hair follicles and help maintain their strength and normal growth. An hour or two daily of this treatment will be helpful. Certain ultra violet

200 SETS OF PLATES ISSUED

Local Agencies Distribute 1934 Auto License Tags.

About 200 automobile license plates for 1934 have been issued in East Liverpool by the Columbiana County Motor club, said Robert C. McHenry, deputy registrar of motor vehicles, since the sales began Dec. 1. The motor club, which issues the tags in the East Liverpool and Salem offices, has sold about 300 in the county, one-third of which are estimated to be in East Liverpool. One hundred sets have also been disposed of by McHenry.

The plates, finished in maroon with white figures, may be used after Dec. 10.

Early registration of motor vehicles is urged upon Ohio motorists this year to eliminate a last-minute rush the last days of December, by Glen M. Daily, registrar of the bureau of motor vehicles. Cooperation of motor car owners is urged in registration work, as it is planned to give brief explanations in connection with the state highway patrol concerning state traffic regulations with every license issued.

Applications for all license plates must be made through local deputy registrars throughout Ohio. Passenger plates will be delivered directly to the owner by the deputy registrar. Commercial car license plates, including trucks and trailers, will be mailed from the bureau of motor vehicles office in Columbus direct to the applicant after receipt of application from the local deputy registrar. Truck owners must apply to the local registrar, presenting a new weight slip showing the correct weight of the commercial vehicle registered.

Daily announced that there will be no extension of time for use of 1933 plates. All automobiles operating on Ohio highways and streets after midnight, Dec. 31, 1933, must carry 1934 plates.

Issuance of 1934 tags will not be made by deputy registrars to applicants unable to furnish correct information in all details, Daily said.

A properly filled out bill of sale must be presented by the applicant, together with all other necessary information asked for on the license application blank. An important item in licensing motor vehicles is the proper identification as to make, model, motor and serial numbers.

Lack of correct information on these points, Daily pointed out, hampers the recovery of stolen cars, since it is then difficult to trace them. On the other hand, proper identification makes it possible for the motor vehicles bureau to furnish police departments with authentic information at once, increasing the chances of recovering stolen vehicles.
